TRAMP'S AUDACIOUS ACT

He Crept into S. E. Gough's House and Lay Down in the Hallway.

When Discovered by Mrs. Gough, Who Nearly Fainted, He Threatened Her and Fled.

The police of several of the precincts are looking for a bold tramp who has been nicknamed "Jack the Creeper." The fellow invaded several residences already during the day time and badly frightened the female inmates. He nearly always enters the houses through open or unlocked

SPIDERS IN THEIR WEBS

Experiences Among the Shylocks Who Crush the Needy.

ONE OF THEM HAS PLED

No Secret Is Made of the Business-Their Justification Is That They Do Not Compel People to Borrow-Tricks by Which They Hope to Evade the Law-Experiences in Seeking to Borrow Money.

An innocent fly in search of a loan on his furniture buzzed around yesterday morning and afternoon into the dens of the spiders who are conducting that business in Wash-ington. Three of the spiders were found busily at work behind the web while a third had flown or rather ambied out of the city to take the mourtain air somewhere in Maryland, or perhaps Virginia.

The spiders, it may be remarked, make no ecret of their trade. In fact they will tell rou all about it and their justification is that if you want to do that kind of business why it is just the kind of business for you if you like it.

The first of these nets visited was the office of the Washington Mortgage and Loan Company, at No 610 F street northwest. The visitor approached a hole in the wall or an office window at which soon appeared a young man. The president of the company was asked for to which the young mausaid:

"They are all out,"
"Who are you?" then asked the visitor.

"Oh, I am only an employe."

It was food, or e sad, nithat he had athority to transact business and asked the caller to state it. He was first asked, by the way, who he was, to which the visitor produced his credentials.
"My case is this: I own about $200 worth of first-class furniture. I am em-barrassed for some ready case and I would like to realize it on the furniture." guess we can accommodate you," said the spider.

"What will be the method of procedure?" HE WANTED TO BORROW. "Well, how much would like to get?"
"Could I get $50?"

"Oh, yes."
"How much will it cost?" "Well, let me see. The papers of record will be about $2.50, and the commissions, including the interest, will be $5. This $7.50 deducted will leave you $42.50. You must make a note for $50. Then you give us a deed of trust for the furniture. If the note is not paid we are at liberty to sell the furniture, and out of the sales all expenses for the same will come. If the note is not paid and it is desired to renew P. the $2.70 will not have to be paid again, but the $5 expenses will be about the same, and that will be paid from month to month until the debt is liquidated. One of the items of the $5 is the fee of the appraiser, and he will call this morn-ing to see if the furniture can stand a loan of $50."

The next place visited was the Coults. us a deed of trust for the furniture.

The next place visited was the Capital Loan and Guarantee Company, at 662 P street northwest. After a brief statement of the misfortunes of the caller at the window, one of the two men who are doing window, one of the two men who are doing business, invited the applicant into the back office, where it was quiet and business-like. The agent, after a renewed hearing of the tribulations of the manout of cash, asked how much was wanted.

"Well, to tell you the truth," said the inchrymose applicant, "I have just been over to that other place there on this street and I can get $50 on $200 worth of first-furniture. They want to charge me $2 for recording the papers and $5 a month for the loan. Can you do any better than that?"

RAISED THE LIMIT. "Oh yes. We will let you have $75, but the expenses will be just the same with the

"What is the $5 for? "Merely expenses. You know we don't put up our own money. The man who lends the money must have a profit on it. The

In this case the applicant would be obliged to make a note for $75, and would receive the difference between that sum and $2,50 for ording, $5 for various comm

The lender is secured by a note and by a deed of trust to the lender of the goods on which the money is loaned. The deed of trust or mortgage is foreclosable on any of trust of mortgoge is foreclosable on any one of a half dozen grounds therein re-cited, such as falling to keep up the in-surance, belief that the goods will be removed from the premises, or if the goods "shall be endangered in any other manner," all of which is in the option and discretion of the lender.

The five dollars is to be paid every mouth that the note remains unpaid, that sum to be made up of new appraisements, new commissions to the fellow who puts up the money to the firm, and more interest. This agent was very frank. He said that as a matter of fact the company made nothing much out of the first mouth, their profits coming in in the subsequent months, "We don't ask anybody to invest with us," he said, "Everything is fair and square and legal."

He was asked if five dollars per month interest on a loan of seventy-five dollars was a fair interest. To this he promptly replied:

"I have explained to you that the $5 not interest. The 65 cents is interest and that is within the law. No one would get in any trouble or further expense if he paid up promptly when his debt was due." This lender will also inspect the furniture to-day some time.

The establishment of Mr. Strauss in Room 4, Firemen's Insurance building, hortheast corner Seventh street and Louis-iana avenue was next visited. The office was in charge of Miss Lily Myers. Sho receive the visitor very pleasantly. "Is Mr. Strauss in?

"No. Mr. Strauss has left the city and will not be back for a good while," she said. "He has gone off for his summer

"Oh, no, not from Mr. Strauss," she replied. "He is not in that business now. In fact, he hasn't made any loans of that kind for about five months."

"Is this Mr. Strauss the same as the one spoken of by the Washington Times?"

queried the visitor.

"Yes," she said, "but there are two sides to every story, and I know if Mr.

"I would like to do business with you if I can," said the applicant, "Well, if you can, you can," said Shylock, telling the exact truth about it.

The visitor gave him the identical song and dance as he had given the other robber burons, "Yes," said Mr. Newman, "If the furniture is all right you can have the $75." "What will it cost me?" Two dollars and a half for papers and interest at the rate of 5 per cent, per armum. "What about the $5 for rene wal?" "There is no five dollars for a rene wal, because I never renew anything. Mr. Newman was shown the contract obtained from the Mortgage Company, which he read over and said that his deed of trust would be very much like that. He was told that the visitor had come to see him from the notice he had read of him in The Times.

"Well, it strikes me." said Mr. Newman, "that that would be a very good reason why you shouldn't come." This being explained to him he said that he would call around and look at the furni-
